

WEAREALL

Reaching out, making connections, and following through with treatment and housing services that change lives is demanding work. The men and women who work in Odyssey House's community-based programs understand what is at stake when substance misuse or mental health problems are not treated. While they see the pain of addiction and the tragedy of lives cut short, they also see hope in recovery and lives saved.

Helping New Yorkers overcome life challenges keeps us going and keeps us on the front lines.

In this report, read about how volunteer recovery coach Jesse Westbrook and his colleagues at the Odyssey House Recovery Center are reaching out and connecting with families, adolescents, and seniors in their South Bronx community.

WHAT YOU CANNOT DO ALONE, WE CAN DO TOGETHER

Treatment and recovery services are at the heart of what we provide at Odyssey House. Supporting New Yorkers and their families as they overcome addiction, mental illness, homelessness, and medical challenges is our core mission. Our mission is continuously evolving as we enhance services to meet the needs of our communities and incorporate the latest scientific and behavioral research into our treatment.

With 66,000 American lives lost to drug overdoses last year, the majority due to opioid misuse, our mission is critical and there is no time to lose. The opioid epidemic is killing more people than at the height of the HIV/AIDS epidemic in the 1990s and surpasses all other accidental deaths in America including on the roads and by guns.

In the last year, we trained more than 1,000 staff, treatment participants, and members of the public in opioid overdose prevention techniques using naloxone, a fast-acting opioid reversal medication. This life-saving medication is widely available in all our treatment, housing, medical, and administrative offices. We have also extended training services to corporations who are eager to equip their employees with the tools to save a life, and our trainers have conducted workshops at organizations ranging from health insurers to marketing agencies.

As the epidemic shows no sign of abating, our call to action is urgent and we are grateful to all of you who joined us this year in support of treatment programs. However, treatment is just the beginning of what it takes to save a life. Individual treatment plans that incorporate housing, educational/vocational and medical services are the best route to a sustained recovery. For some people with opioid addiction, medication assisted treatment is an effective way to reduce deadly overdose risk and allows them to pursue treatment goals. We offer all the latest medications and some old ones – such as methadone maintenance – to meet their needs.

As the needs of our community evolves, we have extended our reach into a wide range of behavioral health, medical, and housing services all the while paying attention to the needs of the people we serve to live with dignity, respecting themselves and others.

Our mission is as critical today as it was when Odyssey House opened its doors more than fifty years ago in response to a heroin epidemic in 1967. Moreover, while treatment services have improved with research and scientific innovations, the heart of our services still resides in the passion of the staff, board members, and countless family and friends who support the men, women, and children who are determined to turn their lives around.

Thank you for your support.

Peter Provet, Ph.D. President and CEO

A COMMITMENT TO SAVING LIVES

The opioid epidemic is a game changer. In the last year alone, more than 66,000 Americans died from drug-related causes, the majority from opioid overdoses. This epidemic is continuing to ravage communities across the country, killing men and women from all walks of life. In cities, suburbs and small towns, emergency responders, hospital personnel, employers and co-workers, mothers and fathers, brothers and sisters, husbands and wives are on the front lines of a scourge that is hollowing out families and communities.

It has to stop. And by working together to support treatment and prevention efforts, we believe it will.

In the last year, we've started to see signs that the death rate has leveled off. This is good news, but it's not enough. Opioid abuse is the most serious public health crisis in a generation – and is poised to become the same for the next, if we cannot stop parents from dying and young people from becoming addicted.

These are issues that concern me and my colleagues on the Boards of Odyssey House and Odyssey Foundation. Knowing that we can help save, and rebuild, lives is what drives us to support treatment and recovery programs that are among the best in the business. All Odyssey House treatment and housing services are backed by evidence-based research that has consistently demonstrated the success of Medication-Assisted Treatment, supportive housing, vocational and educational services.

Keeping this impressive range of programs up and running in a city as diverse and costly as New York is a team effort. That is why I'm so grateful to Commissioner Arlene González-Sánchez and her team at New York State Office of Alcoholism and Substance Abuse Services, as well as to Dr. Martha Sullivan and her team at New York State Office of Mental Health, for their investments in community-based services. I am also appreciative of the support we receive from the Department of Corrections and Community Supervision to address addiction in the criminal justice arena.

In New York City, we thank the Human Resources Administration and the Department of Housing Preservation and Development, elected representatives, community and business leaders, neighborhood associations, other social service providers, and our public health and safety representatives.

And on the national level, we thank our partners at the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration and the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy.

Finally, I'd like to thank the clinical, administrative and management staffs; my colleagues on the Boards of Trustees; our philanthropic, corporate, and foundation partners; and the many friends of Odyssey House who support us year after year.

By investing in Odyssey House, you have joined a community that believes helping the most vulnerable among us, helps us all. I can think of no better investment. Thank you for joining.

Sincerely,

Richard C. O'Connor Chairman, Odyssey House

A PLACE TO CALL HOME

Supportive housing changes lives and communities

Research has proven that supportive housing is a cost-effective solution for people experiencing chronic homelessness. It not only resolves homelessness and increases housing stability, it also improves health and lowers public costs by reducing the use of publicly-funded crisis services, including shelters, hospitals, psychiatric centers, jails, and prisons.

At Odyssey House, the majority of tenants in our 454 units are in recovery from substance abuse, mental illness, medical conditions, or a combination of these disabilities. We provide community-based care for this vulnerable population using evidence-based housing interventions that combine permanent affordable housing assistance with wrap-around supportive services.

Our housing options meet the permanent and transitional housing needs of families and individuals who are participating in, or have completed, our treatment program. We also provide permanent housing to formerly homeless families and individuals, including many with special needs or disabilities.

Whatever their needs, our tenants receive the same level of services: a safe, affordable place to live with access to a dedicated team of on-site support staff to help them live independent, stable lives in the community. All housing programs offer counseling, referral, and resident advocacy and are designed to support the Odyssey House dedication to continuity of care and aftercare services.

We also take very seriously our commitment to being a good neighbor and purposely invest in high-quality architectural design and construction materials to ensure our buildings blend in with their surroundings. Going this extra step pays off for our tenants and our neighbors. Providing a dignified and attractive living environment for men and women who struggle with psychosocial challenges improves their chances of leading independent lives and encourages them to participate in community life. Studies show that when supportive housing fits into the community and tenants have access to on-site services, the development can be a springboard to help stimulate further investments that jump-start revitalization efforts.

Odyssey House Tinton Avenue in the Bronx is one such development. Opened in 2014, this 65-unit single occupancy apartment building for homeless men and women coping with mental illness was built on a semi-abandoned lot that was a blight in the neighborhood and created security concerns for residents. Today, this building is a favorite meeting place for neighborhood groups, and tenants and staff alike are recognized for the contributions they make to the health and safety of the community.

MAKING A DIFFERENCE EVERY DAY

When working together means sharing a mission

The heart and soul of Odyssey House are the men and women who work in our treatment programs, housing services, and administrative offices.

Running a complex social services organization that serves more than 1,500 people with a range of needs from intensive medication-assisted treatment, and medical and mental health problems, to job and housing placement, takes skill and commitment. It also takes compassion and a deeply held belief that we all need, and deserve, second chances when faced with life challenges.

work on the front lines as direct care counselors, program directors, and housing supervisors. They have caseloads that can include pregnant women and mothers with infants and young children; youth addicted to opioids who are frightened their next overdose could be the fatal one; and adult men and women who are desperate to find a new way of living for themselves and the families who depend on them. The work is hard and the hours are long but the satisfaction that comes from helping save someone's life is real, and if you ask our staff, why they come to work each day, they will say because it's worth it.

The contribution to the 350 people who work at Odyssey House improve the lives of vulnerable New Yorkers cannot be overstated. With a top-notch team that includes: social workers, counselors, educators, health and wellness professionals, accountants, housing specialists, maintenance crews, administrators, managers, and childcare specialists, Odyssey House is one of the most respected social services agencies in the City.

Working for Odyssey House is more than a job, it's a rewarding career that offers professional development and training opportunities, recognition awards, and a range of life and wellness benefits that help staff take care of themselves while they take care of others.

RECOVERY IN THE COMMUNITY

At Odyssey House, recovery is more than just sobriety. Recovery includes engaging in your community, preparing yourself for a fulfilling career, taking responsibility for your health, and expressing yourself creatively. To that end, many of the events and activities we sponsor promote long-term recovery through recreation, wellness education, civic restoration opportunities, and other social activities. Last year's events included the opening of the Odyssey House Recovery Center in the Bronx, celebrating fitness and wellness at our 12th Annual Run for Your Life 5K, opening our ninth art exhibition, and commemorating our residents' academic achievements. We are also pleased to recognize the members of our community, including our colleagues and Boards of Trustees, for their dedication to the men, women, and children we serve. When committed individuals come together to support our mission, they make a powerful difference in the lives of thousands of New Yorkers.

As part of their annual employee-led service day, accounting firm RSM visited Odyssey House to weed gardens, clean up debris, and paint railings and light posts at the George Rosenfeld Center for Recovery.

Odyssey House COO John Tavolacci, Dr. Provet, Odyssey House recovery coach Jesse Westbrook, NYS Lt. Gov. Kathleen Hochul, OASAS Commissioner Arlene González-Sánchez, State Assemblyman Victor Pichardo, Odyssey House Director of Outpatient Services Mary Callahan and Community Board 5 Chairman Dr. Bola Omotosho cut the ribbon at the newly opened Recovery Center in the Bronx.

More than 1,000 people came out to our 12th annual Run for Your Life event to show their support for men and women in treatment for substance use and mental health disorders. The event was emceed by WPIX reporter James Ford (left, with John Tavolacci).

Education has long been a part of the treatment plan at Odyssey House. Residents like Matika E., who received her high school equivalency diploma at last year's graduation ceremony, are encouraged to build on their academic achievements. "Odyssey House is only a stepping stone. My journey isn't over."

Our ninth art exhibition explored the structures and dynamics of how people define family. Above, Odyssey House President Dr. Peter Provet with new board member Kate Rothko at the opening reception.
